Partner

Dan Combs is a partner at DCI where he provides the firm's clients with strategic counsel and manages public affairs and digital advocacy campaigns that are designed to serve clients' needs. He has first-hand experience across a variety of policy issues, including tax reform, trade, financial services, consumer products, manufacturing and healthcare. Dan joined DCI in 1999 when it had less than 20 people and has been involved with its growth since then.

Prior to joining DCI, Dan served as Director of Grassroots & Mobilization at Citizens for a Sound Economy (CSE). In this capacity he oversaw mobilization of CSE members and constituents in public policy campaigns. Dan took a leave of absence from CSE in 1996 to manage a victorious re-election campaign for Congressman Walter Jones (R-NC), for whom Dan had previously worked with during the successful 1994 congressional campaign to unseat the incumbent officeholder.

Dan earned a Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering from North Carolina State University where he was on the ACC Championship swimming team in 1992.

When he isn't battling for his clients, Dan is engaged in activities aimed to benefit his community. Dan has been an active supporter of both the American Diabetes Association and Scouting America - serving in various leadership positions with both organizations. Dan has also been engaged with the American Legions Boys State of Virginia for over 20 years and he currently serves as the Program Director and Member of the Board of Directors for the organization.

Northern Virginia is where he and his wife, Jenny, call home and where they have raised their four children.
