

Paul Ryan

Partner

Paul Ryan is a Partner at DCI with over two decades of experience managing public policy campaigns for Fortune 500 companies, trade associations, and coalitions at the intersection of communications, public affairs, and political advocacy.

Paul specializes in technology, broadband, and internet policy, where he has advised senior executives and shaped public opinion around some of the most consequential policy debates to influence outcomes in Congress, Federal Communications Commission and other federal agencies, state legislatures, and local governments - aided by deep relationships with leading policy experts, think tanks, and research institutions.

Paul advises leading financial institutions and trade groups on strategies related to consumer credit protections and regulatory policy. He leads DCI's Intellectual Property practice area, delivering litigation communications and advocacy strategies in legal battles before U.S. District and Federal Courts, International Trade Commission, European Commission, and the U.S. Supreme Court where he directed a communications strategy that supported a unanimous decision.

Paul has spoken at numerous client events, trade shows, and conferences discussing communications strategies. He is an alumni of the American Council on Germany's Young Leader program.

Before joining DCI in 2005, Paul worked on political campaigns and as a writer and research analyst for Houghton Mifflin. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Political Science and International Relations from the University of Notre Dame and a Master's degree in Public Policy & Administration from Northwestern University.

Paul lives in Arlington, Virginia with his wife, Rachel, and their four energetic kids.
